

SHARE YOUR LIFE STORY BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE

INTERVIEW

Richard Campbell, M.Ed.

RICHARD CAMPBELL

is an author, speaker, and writing workshop leader. His passion is encouraging folks to record their life stories as legacy gifts to family, friends, and community. He takes his message to adult learners, including universities, libraries, service clubs, and guests on transatlantic crossings with a major cruise ship line. A well-known expert on writing life stories, Richard presented a session on memoir writing at the International Writer's Digest Conference in New York City.

MEDIA EXPERIENCE

Richard has been interviewed on more than a dozen Top 50 U.S. radio stations. He has also appeared on CBC Radio and written for newspapers in New Brunswick and Ontario, Canada.

Availability: Canada and the United States by arrangement

STORY IDEAS:

- When it's hurricane season—or any natural disaster: Rescue your life story by getting it down on paper before it's lost forever
- Thanksgiving—The one thing that links generations: Sharing life stories keeps families close when relatives gather for holidays
- Christmas: Discover the gift that everyone can afford but no one already has
- Some life stories should never be told: Find out why—and what to do if you uncover shocking family secrets
- The best book you'll ever read is the one you write—your own life story
- Cruising for free: How I became a guest workshop speaker on the high seas and work for just 2 hours a day
- Why do people like reading obituaries? They are powerful reminders of a life well lived. Capture yours before it's too late
- Not a professional writer? If you've ever written a love letter or email, you can write your life story

Richard is the co-author of Writing Your Legacy: The Step-by-Step Guide to Crafting Your Life Story, published by Writer's Digest Books.
